Worms are a fact—ugly perhaps, but nonetheless a fact—in poultry. They exist wherever poultry are raised. They are not usually seen, but that doesn't mean they aren't present, doing a tremendous amount of hidden damage.

Worms do not cause a great amount of death loss, but they do affect growth and egg production—and consequently increase the cost of raising poultry materially.

A few worms are probably of small importance in the life of a chicken, but, because of their universal occurence, it is a constant struggle to prevent the development of worm infections to the point where they will seriously affect the birds.

Worms may place a severe stress on the normal physiological processes of poultry. Such a stress tends to make birds less resistant to other kinds of infection or stress factors. Not uncommonly, laying birds will suddenly fall of their normal rate of production. The only abnormality found is worms. In such cases, the stress of high egg production makes the birds more susceptible to worm infection, and the worms build up until the combination of high production and worm population causes the birds to break down.

During the growing period, it is particularly important to prevent worms from gaining control. For birds to develop rapidly and become good layers, a worm-control program is essential.

Anti-worm measures include feeding a well-balanced diet, practicing sanitation, and giving medication regularly. In regard to the first of these, poultry should receive a ration that i adequate in vitamin A and vitamin-B complex. Lack of these particular vitamins makes the birds more susceptible to worm infections.

Santiary practices aiding worm control include: removal of contaminated litter and thorough clean-up, good range management, ample room for birds, the exclusion of pigeons and other flying birds, and use of insecticides to control certain intermediate hosts of worms.

Medication provides immediate benefits by removing alrge numbers of worms and long-term benefits by reducing contamination of the environment.

There are specific drubs for poultry worms. Certain producttts contain several drugs so that removal of different species may be accomplished at once. In some cases, where contamination is great, continuous low-level medication is recommended against worms.

Wesleyan Guild Met Jnne 6th

The Wesleyan Service Guild, of Trinity Methodist Church of the Appomattox Charge, held its June meeting on Monday evening, June 6, at the parsonage, with the Rev. and Mrs. Floyd J. Wingfield receiving the members and guests.

The meeting was called to order by the new president, Mrs. Frances Kern. Mrs. Cleo Reynolds led the devotional and the program was then turned over to Miss Sallie Lee Campbell. The theme for the June meeting was "Toward a World Fellowship" and Miss Campbell gave the background introduction, which included remarks on the founding of the United Nations in 1945. She pointed out that, although the U. N. has not been perfect, it is felt that it has kept us out of a global war. She further stated that in 1953, Dag Hammarskjord, Secretary General of the U. N., compared the U. N. to Columbus's flagship, the Santa Maria, sailing an uncharted sea toward a new world, bearing men who would contribute to a new civilization.

Informal talks were given as follows: "The U. N. as a Keeper of the Peace", Mrs. Lillian Martin; "The United Nations — An Instrument of Social Progress", Mrs. Marian Martin; "The United Nations and the Individual", Mrs. Dorothy Coleman; and, "What We Can Do About the United Nations", Miss Arlene Drinkard.

During the brief business session, following the program, new yearbooks were presented to the members by the vice-president, Mrs. Lillian Martin.

Plans were completed for the annual covered dish supper to be held on July 13, 1955, at the home of Mrs. Virginia Martin, Edgewood Addition, Lynchburg.

This meeting was the fourth anniversary of the organization of the Wesleyan Service Guild in this church, and decorations and refreshments carried out the birthday celebration.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Sad Note From The Bugle

All of us on the Clarion were alarmed to learn that our principal rival in the newspaper field —the Balesville Bugle—might have to shut down.

Crops were bad in Balesville last year and one of their factories moved out of town. Just temporary hard times, of course — but the Bugle needs help now if it's to survive.

So, this paper is going to scrape up a little money to help tide them over, and we hope other local concerns will do the same. We've seldom agreed with them editorially over the years—but we want their competition to keep us on our toes.

From where I sit, this country needs papers with different points of view—just as it needs people with different ideas and tastes. You may prefer iced tea as a hot-weather cooler . . . I generally choose a cold glass of beer. But if either of us couldn't express his opinion, and act on it, that would be "bad news" for the whole community.
